When you are looking for a free car insurance quote, take a look at the calculators that you will see, but even when you do this, there are things that you should remember.

First, remember that you need to compare plans that are quite similar. Comparing insurance plans solely on the basis of a single fact will create a deceptive picture. Make sure that all of the factors are compared, from the liability to the coverage to the deductible. Find out what extras are offered and make sure that you are in a good place to qualify them. A spreadsheet, whether on the computer or on a sheet of notebook paper can keep things straight for you.

When you have a few companies that you have managed to get a good free car insurance quote from, remember that it is time to get information from other sources. Do any of your friends have dealings with the insurance company? Word of mouth is still a great way to get car insurance. Make sure that before you buy a policy online that you give the company a call to judge them on their customer service. Similarly, it is worth figuring out who you would need to file a claim with in the area should it become necessary. You may also want to call the Better Business Bureau to figure out if any complaints have been made against the company, and you might also want to contact your state's Department of Insurance as well.

There are many different things that you should keep in mind when you are buying your car insurance, but a free car insurance quote can be a great place to start. This is a good way to figure out exactly what you can pay and how to maximize the money that you spend. But above all, make sure that when you are comparing various quotes, that you are really comparing apples to apples. The standard coverage on one policy might be an optional coverage on another policy, so take the time to make sure that you are comparing identical quotes before you decide which one is most cost effective for you.
