You should get Detroit Tiger tickets to watch terrific baseball action. The Detroit Tigers are a professional baseball team based in Detroit, Michigan. Nicknamed "the Motor City Kitties", "the Bengals", "the Tigs", and the "Bless You Boys", the Tiger club was founded in Detroit in 1894. They are a member of the Central Division of Major League Baseball's American League. Their ballpark since 2000 has been the Comerica Park. Their name, 'Tiger' comes from the orange stripes that they wear on their black stockings.

Tigers In The Past

In the late 1880s, the Tigers known as the 'Wolverines', won the National League pennant and an exhibition World Series. Their leading players at that time were Hardy Richardson, Charlie Getzein and Hall of Famers "Big Sam" Thompson and Dan Brothers.

However after the 1888 season, the team disbanded. A new club of Tigers was formed and it joined the International League in 1889 to go on to win the League championship. The fans who bought Detroit Tiger tickets, were really disheartened to see the disbanding of the league. In that decade, the Detroit Tiger fans bought Detroit Tiger tickets to watch the team play at Bennett Park and Burns Park. Briggs Stadium, that was constructed eleven years later and renamed Tiger Stadium in 1961, was used by the Tigers till the end of the 1999. After which they shifted to Comerica Park.

The Tigers, Baseball And The 20th Century

The team got Ty Cobb in 1905. He was the greatest player of all time. Sam Crawford, Hughie Jennings, Bill Donovan and George Mullin also chipped in to get the Tigers their first American League pennant in 1907. In the 1920s, Cobb himself took over the executive duties; however the Tigers did not perform well. The Tiger teams of the 1930s were consistently among the league's best with players like Mickey Cochrane, Hank Greenberg, and Charlie Gehringer.

With the end of World War II, Hank Greenberg and others from the military returned and the Tigers won the 1945 American League pennant. After their win, the Tigers again sank back through the 1950s.

The next decade, the Detroit Tigers bounced back with winning 101 games. Jake Wood, Willie Horton, Earl Wilson, Bill Bruton, and Gates Brown contributed to Detroit's rise in this period. Detroit Tigers repeatedly posted winning records throughout the 1960s. Lolich was unanimously voted as American League Most Valuable Player in 1968 when the Tigers defeated the World champion St. Louis Cardinals.

In 1969, the Tigers were placed in the American League East and the team spent much of the next decade in the middle or lower ranks of the AL East.

Mark Fidrych "the Bird" who made his debut in 1976 and team manager "Sparky", George Anderson tried to give the Detroit Tigers the much needed boost during this phase.

In 1980s, John Fetzer, the owner sold the team to Tom Monaghan and in 1984, the Tigers growled all the way up to win the World Series championship. But after that the fans who bought Detroit Tiger tickets were much disappointed through the rest of the decade. During the 1990s, the Tigers did not post any winning records and their collapse was blamed on GM Randy Smith as it was under him that the Tigers squandered away their talent with futile trade offs.

Detroit Tigers Today

In 2000, the team shifted their ballpark to the new Comerica Park. Dave Dombrowski was hired as the team president and under him the Tigers demonstrated a readiness to sign marquee free agents. The team signed or traded for several veterans and the stake paid off. Tigers improved their performance. Although, after the 2005 season, the Tigers have been plagued with losses, however their fans have not given up hope. They are buying Detroit Tiger tickets to cheer their team.
