

Substitute P2P Sites with Unlimited Music Downloads

The growing industry of unlimited music downloads has created a competition that has forced the competitors to present their products in various ways, with the hope that they can attract music enthusiasts to patronize their services. Thus, one particular site will offer a package which consists of various downloadable, plus customer care, music software, and payment plan. At first look, each package seems to be different from the ones offered by other providers yet taking a closer look will reveal that there is a close similarity among them.

Free unlimited music downloads sites seem to lure many customers. Needless to say, it's because of the savings that they can get which really make these sites more attractive than others. What they don't realize is that it is against the law, violating the provisions of the Recording Industries Association of America (RIAA). Despite the many apprehensions made due to illegal file sharing, still there are many who would take the risk of getting free but illegal unlimited music downloads, especially those who are just new users.

These kinds of unlimited music downloads sites present their products in a very convincing way just to assure you of your safety. However, all file sharing activities involve some degree of risk. To give you a feeling of security, they claim that they have utilized encryption in their download program, or you can apply masking on your IP address, and to top them all, safety programs like ProtoWall, PeerGuardian and SafePeer can be installed for safety. But it is very easy to trace any unlawful activity on the internet, and even you could not hide.

The worst thing that you could suffer from P2P sites that offer unlimited music downloads is data loss and computer damage. Viruses, adwares and spywares, might be downloaded together with your music files. Because of this your computer is at risk of infection that even up-to-date softwares cannot detect or remove. This can eventually lead to loss of data which can cost you not only in terms of money but also of a rich stock of knowledge and information.

The question is why should you undergo such a risky situation when you can get unlimited music downloads in a legal way? Way above the savings that you can get, real music enjoyment comes from the fact that you abide by the laws.

Paying for membership fees would not cost much. For a very minimal unlimited music downloads membership fee, you can access the site's wide range of music database. The options come as monthly, annual or one-time lifetime membership fee. Sometimes it would give the impression that getting a monthly or annual membership subscription is better, but it would be wiser to pay a little more for a one-time payment for a lifetime subscription which usually costs not higher than fifty dollars.

If you are looking for a better way to download music as much as you can, then P2P sites can surely give this to you. After all, unlimited music downloads should be enjoyed without risk and fear of any legal issue and computer data loss.
