

Theresienthal Tumbler

The Theresienthal craftsmanship Tumbler is stunning, making the ring clear and lovely. I have further crystal items listed from this prestigious manufacturer if you are interested in more. If you take a look at the Theresienthal you will see that the glassware produced there is marketed at the finest locations worldwide.

Up for auction is a pair of traditional crystal schnapps Theresienthal glasses or shot glasses. These tiny vintage glasses have a clear blown crystal cupola encircled by a fine ribbed band of amber glass resting on a clear lip. Four decorative amber rosettes are attached to the sides. The name of this retired pattern is unknown to me and it is my educated guess that they were produced by the Kristallglasmanufaktur Theresienthal GmbH, Zwiesel, Bavaria sometime after 1970. The small glasses are in excellent condition. There are no nicks, dings, chips, scratches nor repairs.

The gilded look that was all the rage on Fall's runway has landed on the table. The Caroline Mercury Canister has an antiqued copper finish, the goblet an amber luster and the fabulous crystal stemware from coveted names Moser and Theresienthal is etched.

With around 15 glassworks, glass workshops and galleries, Zwiesel is the centre of glassmaking and processing in the Bavarian Forest. The Technical College for Glass, Schott Zwiesel, Ambiente, Rimpler and the Theresienthal crystal factory are just a few of the names associated with glassmaking in the town.
