

Richard Ginori Soup Plate

Richard Ginori porcelain has a long history of excellence. Ginori tableware is Italian porcelain of the highest quality that has been in production for over two hundred years. Members of the noble Ginori family are known to have lived in Florence, Italy dating back to 1304.

In 1737 the prominent Italian aristocrat Carlo Ginori started a hard paste porcelain factory on his country estate in Doccia near Florence, Italy. Ginori porcelain became known also as Doccia porcelain. There was only one other European hard-paste porcelain factory at that time which was located in Meissen, Germany. Richard Ginori porcelain was collected by the Medicis and other European nobility such as Napoleon's wife and Marie Louise of Austria. After five generations the family firm merged with a large industrial Milanese company named Richard in 1896 and became known as Richard Ginori Porcelain. Today, Ginori and Richard Ginori porcelain are highly sought after and very collectible.
