

childless heros

There are many reasons why people don't want to have children; some feel that they can have a better life without the time consuming and many times joyless burden of raising a child. Others don't want children because they are not ready to assume the responsibility of raising a child, some just don't like children and don't want to have one. There are countless ways a person can enjoy their life without having to be a parent. And more people than ever are experiencing the freedom and pleasure that is available by being childless. Not only do they have more time to enjoy themselves, but more money to spend. Instead of paying for the expenses of raising a child, that money can be spent on things like decent housing, entertainment, and countless goodies. The time needed to enjoy those things is precious and the childless person has the freedom to enjoy a beautiful life.

There are people that need children and are capable of raising them; they want a child more than anything else. Most of their lives are spent raising their children, being a good parent is their goal. You can see those caring parents every where, they follow after their children with a gleam in their eye, and they are oblivious to anything else. They look forward to the day when they will be grand parents, and are able to spend their final years with their grandchildren. That is the reward for being a successful parent. People that don't want to raise children are thought of by them as rebelling against the wishes of the Supreme Being. Some parents feel they are doing god work by raising children, then they should do more of their godly duty by filling their homes with unwanted children, they will surely get a blessing for that. This might be a perfect way to place many homeless children in good homes.

Most childless people love children, even if they prefer to remain childless. Many of them donate their services for the betterment of children. Some volunteer in programs that are helpful to the children of working mothers; others tutor children without charge, helping those that are falling behind in their studies. They are not the type of people that any supreme being would punish.

Parents that abuse their children are incapable of raising a child and never should have had one. Some parents that chose to have children are not able to support them, and they have to depend on state funding. There is no shortage of children, there are more of them than parents can handle. There are many kinds of lifestyles in today's world, and raising children is not the only one. Good folks everywhere are experimenting with better ways to live. Childless families give its members more time for self discovery, and have more fulfilling relationships. Some of the people that wanted to remain childless are now outstanding citizens and are making large contributions to our society. They should not be downgraded just because they chose to remain childless. Those that want everybody to have a child will never be able to force people to have children; they will only create anger and not more children. If you decide to raise a child and think that you would be a good parent, go right ahead. But never push your personal choice on others; they also are entitled to the personal choice of not having a child.

About the Author

retired and single

Source: <http://www.articletrader.com>