

Prostate Cancer Symptoms You May Experience

Sometimes you can experience prostate cancer symptom that may be related to another condition or disease as they can mimic prostate cancer symptom. If you experience any signs of a prostate cancer symptom, make an appointment immediately with your doctor to ensure that you catch any problems in their earliest stages.

When you have prostate cancer symptom, it does not necessarily mean you have prostate cancer. You will have a thorough examination when you visit your doctor and tell him you have prostate cancer symptom. He or she will ask you many questions pertaining to your prostate cancer symptom and it is important you are very honest with them about how and what you are feeling.

Some of the questions your doctor may ask may be uncomfortable and the examination for prostate cancer symptom is not pleasant either. Though it may not be a fun experience, it is something that must be done when you are presenting with a prostate cancer symptom.

If you feel a frequent need to urinate, especially after you have gone to bed, this could be a prostate cancer symptom. Another sign or prostate cancer symptom is either difficulty in holding back your urine, or having difficulty getting started. When you have a flow of urine that is not strong or is interrupted, this may be a prostate cancer symptom.

Most of your prostate cancer symptom will focus on elimination. If you are experiencing pain or burning while you are urinating, this may be a prostate cancer symptom. Other prostate symptom may include trouble getting and sustaining an erection, pain when ejaculation occurs, blood in semen or urine, and if you are feeling pain or stiffness regularly in your upper thighs, hips, or lower back.

Only your doctor can definitely diagnose prostate cancer symptom. That is why it is important when you are a man over the age of 50, to have a regular prostate exam on a yearly basis. It is best to catch any problems well before they start, and this is one way you can ensure that.
