

If You're Broke Give Me All Your Money And I'll Help You

I received an email the other day about getting an ebook on over 100 emergency cash generating ideas. If I was interested in something like this I sure as heck would not have almost $50 to buy this book. If the situation were that I needed to generate emergency cash I guarantee that I would not have almost $50 to throw away on something that may or may not help me to raise money. If I needed emergency cash then chances are I don't have the cash to throw away on some Ebook.

What do you think about all those emails you get offering some free report or giveaway? Every time after you enter in you information low and behold you go to the one time offer page Does anybody ever give out anything for free these days? Free must be the most popular bait on the market today. Some marketers even keep on lowering the prices of these one time offers until you finally buy at some price. I hear that the United States is the richest country in the world but how much of this wealth is actually legitimate wealth. Look at Bill Gates and Microsoft, What message do we get from this? Stealing is the only way to get ahead today.

I have spent thousands over the past decade on these so called marketing material, business opportunities and money making information. I understand what its like to be strapped for cash and to have all the walls around me crumbling down. During times when I have been unemployed and had no money coming in and then to spend what little I had for something that was supposed to help me. One freelance site charges $2.95 for a 7 day trial and then $29.95 a month thereafter. I have never found any legitimate work from this site and many others that are out there.

I've collected all this info about the scams that are out there and the whole time I was looking for the legitimate ones. In the very near future, Hopefully before New Years I will be putting together a membership site that will allow users to give honest feedback about companies they have worked with. The cost of the membership will be zero because I am hoping that once somebody finds legitimate work they will remain a subscriber for all my rants and raves. I could have been like all the others and charged a good price for everything but people that need help usually don't have the extra to spend. In my research I have found hundreds of legitimate work from home companies that cost nothing to start up and they will pay you an honest hourly wage for your time.

Who am I to provide all of this information? I am someone who has been there and done that and I realize that not everybody has all of this money to throw away. I will not be an affiliate for any of these companies that have passed my criteria and in fact I have gone through all of their application processes to make sure there are no hidden costs or fees. I am still debating on whether I will allow any of these companies to advertise on this site and I guarantee that no company that has not passed my criteria will ever be allowed to advertise on this site.

If in the future any of my members need to contact me they will have all of my contact details not just an email address and a link to some help desk ticket area. I will also never sell or rent out the members info because I know what its like to be bombarded by all these marketers all with some product that has a price on it. I will also be including a special section on the reputable paid survey companies, mystery shopping companies and so forth which are companies that I have discovered over the years that actually pay real cash or merchandise.
