

What Should I Do If I Am a Victim of Identity Theft?

Crimes against properties such as motor vehicles include motor vehicle theft, theft from a motor vehicle, and vandalism to a motor vehicle. In the United States, a motor vehicle is stolen every 20 seconds.

Security Devices

The attitude that car thieves had toward expensive, luxury cars has changed over the years. Nowadays, any car can be a target for automobile theft. Even older model vehicles are stolen by thieves due to the value of its parts. Hundred of anti-theft devices are available from alarm systems to steering wheel locks to Rhino vehicle immobilizers. Most anti-theft systems offer adequate protection against motor vehicle theft. Car alarms are quick to activate when a vehicle is being tampered with, but can be somewhat similar to "the boy who cried wolf." How many times have you heard a car alarm blaring without even bothering to look out the window to see who is fooling with a car? People have been desensitized to car alarms that they do not always draw much attention. Devices that lock the steering wheel or the front tire offer a high degree of protection for a vehicle. Although no anti-theft device is foolproof, car thieves look for the "path of least resistance." In crowded parking facilities, it is logical for a thief to find an unprotected car than defeat a security device. Paying good money to buy a car and nothing to protect it does not make good sense.

Car Burglaries

Leaving valuables visible in a car attracts too much attention and only invites car thieves to strike. Car stereos, radar detectors, Ipods, and numerous other items are commonly taken from cars. In just about all the cases, the items were left visible to people walking by. Removing the items from view is one of your best defenses against this kind of crime.

Some motor vehicle owners are so proud of their subwoofer car stereos they even advertise the stereo's factory name on stickers across the windshield or rear window. You might as well put a magnetic sticker on the side of the car that says, "Please burglarize me." Publicizing to the community that you have an expensive car stereo signals car thieves that your car is a good target to rip off.

Heed this advice so that you can minimize crime in your community and prevent being a victim of the crime of auto theft or auto burglary.
