Distance learning online is becoming more common and it has several benefits and disadvantages compared to traditional classrooms.

Classes that consist of distance learning online are often referred to as e learning courses. These e learning courses have become very popular among non-traditional students who are able to earn an associate or bachelor degree from distance learning colleges, as well as traditional students who are enrolled in a standard university. Many students prefer the freedom that e learning courses provide, and there are numerous distance learning colleges that have sprung up to meet this demand. Because all the course information is online, there is no set schedule or specific time you have to arrive at class. The convenience of being able to deal with class work at your own pace is a comfort to many people, especially if they have busy or unpredictable schedules. Also, most e learning courses lack a formal lecture, or even a recorded lecture you have to sit through. Instead, most of the information is provided through notes and outlines posted online and through assigned reading, which you would have to do in any case. The lack of a lecture is a major time saver for many students and allows them to access the information they need without sitting through a class in addition to completing assignments and reading.

E learning courses help many people to earn degrees, but some people may benefit from the experience of a traditional classroom. In addition to having the structure provided by meeting in a classroom, it also gives students more opportunity to ask questions and interact with the teacher and other students. E learning courses, on the other hand, are much more solitary and require much more effort to ask a question or get clarification. The lack of structure can make e learning courses difficult.

Another aspect of e learning that causes many students to receive poor grades in e learning courses is the fact that the open learning format means that students must have the discipline to complete readings, assignments, and prepare for tests independently. Many students actually benefit from attending class and will procrastinate when faced with an open learning experience. One complaint many students have concerning e learning courses is the degree of isolation that is involved as compared to a traditional classroom. Many people enjoy meeting and getting to know fellow students, as well as pooling resources to study for tests and stay motivated throughout the course. However, when you enroll in an e learning course, you may have to take the class alone without much encouragement from fellow students or instructors.

Distance learning online is not necessarily the best form of learning for everyone, but e-learning has allowed numerous students to get degrees on their own time and own pace.
